

Cat Days

Matt Hetherington

When you only lie around yawning, dozing, & licking yourself when you cast a clear eye on death & taxing activities when you abide where the warmth is, tasting the soft food one mouthful at a time & where time is merely a habit you had once when young and unwise – yet still the night waits like a purring jungle.